Ex-officer whittles cops down to size

Retired Ontarian carves wood likenesses

By Lori Moody

As a police officer, Larry Lambert whittled away his free time to relax and relieve stress.

Lambert put away his gun and badge more than a decade ago but the retired Ontario police officer still devotes time carving wooden figures of police officers, detailed likenesses of birds and elaborate plaques in the workshop attached to his Ontario home.

His work isn't for sale, however, and usually ends up as gifts for friends and family.

"I have stuff all over the country," said Lambert, 65. "I probably have 100 to 200 little policemen all over the country."

Lambert cited income tax reasons for not selling his work. But enjoyment is the other.

"If I can't sit here and do it for the fun of it, I don't want to do it," he said. "...I enjoy doing things for people. I get a kick out of it."

Some of his carvings have been displayed in shops on the Queen Mary and at Ports O'Call.

One design, a cape-clad "spook" holding a silver dagger and one foot resting on a skull, has become a traditional retirement gift for members of the Office of Special Investigation based at Norton Air Force Base.

One of the figures is displayed with other memorabilia at OSI headquarters at Bolling Air Force Base in Washington, D.C.

The figure first was commissioned by Terry Richmond, a reserve colonel with OSI and a retired deputy with the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Office, who spotted a sample of Lambert's work in a Los Angeles hospital in 1977.

Lambert has since carved about 20 "spooks."

"We're very pleased with what he's made," said Richmond who soon will be delivering one of the "spooks" to a brigadier general in Washington, D.C.

Each of the carvings is a little different depending on the beneficiary. But all are marked by Lambert's initials cushioned between two seahorses.

Lambert began whittling as a boy when he admittedly stole wooden apple boxes because he couldn't afford to buy wood for model airplanes.

He refers to himself as a "chip" carver, chipping away at the wood to fashion his designs. He said he never has taken an art class.

"It just comes," he said matter-of-factly of his ability. "It's just a natural thing with me."

A carving just needs finishing touches before it will be given to a member of Air Force Office of Special Investigation.

Larry Lambert, retired Ontario police officer, enjoys carving wood.

He began making figures of police officers several years ago when the wife of a supervisor asked if Lambert could come up with something for a gift for her husband graduating from college.

"I carved a little policeman," he said. "I've been doing it ever since."

Lambert flipped through a bound notebook to show two visitors photographs of his work.

Skateboard fans find few places to ride

By Kimberly Heinrichs

Bobby Smith, 15, of Montclair wants to skateboard off his ramp.

The problem is that it was sitting in the street in front of his home on the 10100 block of Vernon Avenue, a public right of way. Until city workers took it away.

When Smith and his friends attended last week's City Council meeting, he wanted some answers the council members couldn't give.

"Where can I ride my skateboard?"

It's the same question his mother, Brenda Ausman, asked the next day.

"I think it's a shame that they're trying to eliminate skateboarding, like in Upland. The kids need something," she said.

Although no cities have actually banned the wooden ramps used for skateboard manuevers, Upland did consider prohibiting them in private yards until it hit upon a compromise. Skateboarders can keep the ramps in that city, but they must be smaller than 100 square feet. The issue also came before the Rancho Cucamonga council, but it took no specific action.

The Montclair Department of Public Works confiscated Smith's and another ramp after city officials got complaints. Another ramp on Vernon Avenue got run over by a car, said Councilman Walter Hackett, who lives in the neighborhood and has been fielding calls from angry residents.

"They call me up, I'm going to do something," Hackett said, adding that if Smith puts his new ramp back on the street he won't do anything until he gets calls.

"I'm not after those kids," he

Historic house finds a home

By Natalie Shore

Rescued from further ruin, a historic house will have a home now that Chaffey College trustees have formally agreed to relocate the turn-of-the-century Dilorio home to campus quarters.

"We're very excited about the house," said James Anderson, vice president of planning and development. "We're hoping it will become the gem of the campus and the community."

Winning unanimous approval, the house will sit in the northwest sector of the campus between Wilson Avenue and the art gallery.

The donation will memorialize Joseph Dilorio's daughter, Caryn, who died at age 15 in a car accident seven years ago.

The house is historic to both

Such complaints are escalating as fast as the popularity of the pastime rises, according to Public Works Director Carl Sawtell. But aside from the fact that ramps in the street are downright illegal, the city can't allow them on city property like parks, either.

Don't Let Your Child Become A Stranger

As talkative as kids seem to be, they often have trouble expressing ideas and emotions. Sometimes they just don't have the vocabulary. Or they choose not to share feelings and ideas because "nobody understands" — or even because what's going on inside them is just too scary to talk about.

Whatever the reason for their lack of communication, the result is the same: a person who begins living more and more inside himself, becoming a stranger to friends and family.

But we'll work with you to find out what's really going on inside your withdrawn child. And then we'll construct a plan to reopen the lines of communication.

So instead of living with a stranger, talk to the specialists who can talk to kids.

Local post offices reduce their hours

By Kathy Betts

Post offices throughout the Pomona and West valleys have begun cutting their customer service hours.

As part of a nationwide effort to trim $1.2 billion from the U.S. Postal Service's budget, most local post offices are eliminating Saturday service and opening a half-hour to an hour later weekday mornings.

Mail pickup on Sundays nationwide will also be discontinued. It is recommended that customers who normally deposit mail in collection boxes on Sunday for Monday delivery should now do so on Saturday.

Daily mail delivery will not be affected by the changes and express mail will continue to be processed on Sundays, said Joseph Breckenridge, a U.S. Postal Service spokesman for the Santa Ana Division, which includes both valleys.

"More than half of our total capital budget is gone for the next 20 months," he said.

"We plan to save $815 million by not building buildings, buying vehicles or high speed mail processing equipment.

"In the short run it won't hurt us but in the long run it will," he said.

Proposed post office construction nationwide will be put on hold. Post office lobby hours will not be affected, he added.

Local post offices, which will have new window service hours during the week, are:

- Pomona Post Office, opening an hour later in the mornings, 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.;
- Claremont Post Office, opening an hour later in the mornings, 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.;
- La Verne Post Office, opening an hour later in the mornings, 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.;
- Montclair Post Office, opening an hour later in the mornings, 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.;
- San Dimas Post Office, opening a half-hour later in the mornings, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.;
- Upland Post Office, opening an hour later in the mornings, 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.;
- Walnut Post Office, opening an hour later in the mornings, 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.; and,
- Diamond Bar Post Office, opening an hour later in the mornings, 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

None of these post offices have or will have Saturday service.

Out of the three West Valley post offices with Saturday hours, Chino, will discontinue the service.

The Fontana Post Office actually will increase its Saturday hours, opening 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., but will reduce the hours of operation during the week, opening at 9 a.m.

In the past, the Sierra Avenue office would open at 7 a.m. on Mondays to assist morning commuters.

Ontario's main office and two branches will pare down weekday hours. Ontario is not open for Saturday window service.

Contract stations are available for mail drops on weekends in most cities and offer most services provided by post offices, Breckenridge said.

The stations do not offer COD's and foreign parcels, but they handle express, registered and certified mail and sell such things as stamps, he said.

A new contract station will open in Diamond Bar next week at Apex Stationers, 335 S. Diamond Bar Blvd., he said. For locations of other stations, contact your local post office.

In the West Valley, the regional postal facility scheduled to be built this year in Rancho Cucamonga has been temporarily put on hold, said Breckinridge.

Edith Armstrong, postmaster for the Ontario Post Office, said she was disappointed the new Rancho Cucamonga facility was put on hold because more room is needed. Ontario handles all of Rancho Cucamonga's delivery.

Breckinridge said the Rancho Cucamonga building is near the top of his construction priority list.

But that's not saying much, considering the Postal Service doesn't have the money to build, he added.

Postal Service employees need not worry about their jobs, according to Breckenridge.

R.C. residents' phone listings won't change

By Lee Peterson

Rancho Cucamonga residents won't get any surprises this spring when they open their new phone books.

Not only will General Telephone wait another year before deleting the names of the historical communities that compose the city, residents will have the option of retaining the old name, free of charge.

Last December the City Council voted to direct GTE to delete Alta Loma, Etiwanda and Cucamonga from the 1988 phone book and computer information banks.

Residents would have to pay for the following year's listing to show that they lived in Alta Loma, for instance, rather than in Rancho Cucamonga.

In addition, the information computer banks, according to GTE, never again would contain the names of the three separate communities.

But a turnabout occurred thanks to an array of circumstances.

Telephone customers will be able to choose their addresses of record without paying the usual fee. Meanwhile, the cross-referencing of communities and city in directory assistance data banks is available.

GTE representatives in December informed the council that cross-referencing was not possible, and callers would have to specify the city of Rancho Cucamonga, rather than ask for Etiwanda or another community.

Howver, district manager Hal Overton said Tuesday the directory assistance operators would be able to check for telephone numbers under both the community name and the region.

The council was informed in December it needed to decide immediately whether or not to change the directory.

The phone company was asked by city officials to make the change in order to foster a more unified image of Rancho Cucamonga. They also reasoned that the change would clear up ongoing confusion in the directory assistance process.

Whether the city had the legal right to initiate the change is another point. Some argued that it was a matter strictly between the phone company and its customers.

Councilwoman Pamela Wright, the lone dissenter in the December vote, argued that the unification of the image was a good idea, but that the deletion of the community names would cause too many problems.

Mayor Dennis L. Stout said in retrospect that Wright's decision was the only correct judgment. The council should have waited to make the right decision, rather than rush into something, Stout said.

If the council gives the expected approval to the new plan, all phone customers in Rancho Cucamonga will be sent letters which will give them the option to return a postage-paid postcard that would allow them to retain the community on the address they currently hold in the phone book.

Foes of the 1978 incorporation of Rancho argued that the three separate communities would lose their individuality to a tri-community government.

Stout said he also will propose a resolution creating a city policy that officially recognizes the existence of Alta Loma, Etiwanda and Cucamonga, and the city's commitment to preserving the separate identities.

Business-sign issue yet to be resolved

By Candysse Miller

A wait of more than two years to determine what types of business signs will be seen along Upland's streets must go on at least one more month.

The City Council unanimously agreed to continue discussion of its controversial sign ordinance revision plans while staff members draft compromise plans in response to Upland Chamber of Commerce suggestions.

The council's decision did not come without criticism from chamber representatives, who complained that the continued delays would prevent input from the business community in the drafting of the ordinance.

"This seems to be a restriction for a cooperative effort," said Mike Trementozzi, who represented Mountain Green Center at a recent hearing.

"I think that coordination before something is drafted rather than as a final proposal could speed up the process ... if we knew what was in it."

In response, Mayor Richard G. Anderson said the city wanted to draft the latest revisions in response to earlier chamber criticisms of and recommendations for the plan.

The council and the business community reached an impasse of three critical issues of the sign limitations in a December meeting.

Although the city and chamber have agreed to revisions in permanent business signs, they have been unable to reach an accord regarding temporary signs or banners for special events, signs inside businesses and signs in the Cable Airport area.

Several Upland business owners have complained that limits on temporary, special event signs would hinder efforts to compete with neighboring cities for consumer dollars.

"This will have a ripple effect in our city. If we hurt business, we hurt our inhabitants," argued Dennis Hudson, owner of Upland Carpet and Floor Center.

School drinking fountains being tested

By Natalie Shore

West Valley school districts are testing their drinking fountains to find out if they contain potentially harmful amounts of lead.

Sampling taps and baseline spigots, schools are responding to an advisory issued in December by state Superintendent of Public Instruction Bill Honig.

Unsafe levels of lead in drinking water have been found to cause mental impairments in children and kidney disease in adults. Studies have shown that children are particularly vunerable, said Dianne Allen, risk manager for the Chaffey Joint Union High School District.

Data released last year by the Environmental Protection Agency along with recent local studies suggest that lead poisoning still may be a serious threat statewide.

"Manufacturers use varying amounts of lead in the construction of water fountains," said Andy Yasenovsky, risk manager for the county superintendent. According to EPA standards, the amount of lead present in water should not exceed 50 parts per billion, he said.

Unlike the high lead contamination preliminary findings recently reported in Los Angeles schools, laboratory results so far show there is little threat to West Valley students.

"The lab information came back all clear two weeks ago," Allen said. "We took 22 samples, and our highest fountain sample came up only 8 parts per billion."

Five other districts also tested well below the required EPA limit. Mountain View, Central, Ontario-Montclair and Upland measured lead contents no higher than 16 parts per billion.

Chaffey College was the only district to identify a fountain containing higher than allowable levels. One older, outdoor fountain was found to have a lead content of 64 parts per billion, said Joe Revoier, head of maintenance.

"That fountain was immediately removed," he said.

The Alta Loma, Fontana and Cucamonga districts still are waiting for laboratory results, but adminstrators anticipate similarly negligible findings. Regardless of the results, Cucamonga is removing its only refrigerated fountain because of its age, Superintendent John Costello said.

Of the three remaining West Valley school districts, Chino Unified administrators are contracting with a company to conduct both sampling and analysis.

Mt. Baldy Joint has no refrigerated water fountains, and the Etiwanda School district declined to participate, according to Assistant Superintendent Gene Newton.

"Etiwanda's only refrigerated fountain is in the district offices in a new building constructed within the last two years," he said.

Participating districts are reporting their results to the county superintendent's office, which will relay the data to the State Department of Education and other state agencies to determine whether or not to develop a statewide lead policy. Districts are identifying school site, campus location, manufacturer, and fountain model and serial number, said Betty Ruffner, safety and risk management coordinator for the Fontana Unified School District.

The data provided will help isolate which types of fountains may be hazardous, said Ruffner. "If there are any patterns, we'll be able to identify them when all the information is put together."

the period and the region, Anderson said. It is one of the few remaining Sears Catalog homes.

"You ordered it from the picture, and Sears sent a train load of two-by-fours and an instruction manual. You built the house," he said.

The original home of the owner of the Virginia Dare winery and vineyards, the house also pays tribute to the West Valley's agricultural history. "This region was once the largest wine producing area in the world," Anderson said.

The college's acquisition of the Dilorio house also kicks off larger plans to develop a historical park. "We're also looking at adding one of Rancho Cucamonga's old grove homes to create a historic park that ties in with the college's theater arts and cultural centers," Anderson said.

Presently sitting on cement blocks , the house will remain at its 7900 Center Ave. address for another month. The Dilorio family has committed a minimum of $250,000 to moving costs and restoration, an extensive project expected to be completed within a six-month time frame, Anderson said.

"The house will serve the historical preservation interests of both the college and community," he said.

Water slide may finally open at park in May

By Richard Peraza

The wait is ending for Cucamonga-Guasti Regional Park's water worshippers.

The park's long-awaited water slide should be ready for official unveiling Memorial Day (May 30), traditionally opening day for the park's swim lagoon, according to Douglas Hawthorne, the county's division chief of park operations.

And that won't be soon enough to suit many park patrons. Even in the winter the blue structure draws inquiries from three to four visitors every day who want to know when they'll get their first chance to try it out, according to Tye Kitasato, assistant park superintendent.

The project at the Ontario park, on Archibald Avenue north of the San Bernardino (10) Freeway, has been in the works for more than a year and under construction since August, he said.

Originally slated for October completion, design snafus slowed the project down, according to Hawthorne.

But although the county has yet to complete it's final inspection of the facility, there's little left to delay the planned opening, he said. Once handrails and landscaping are installed, the project will be complete.

Built atop a man-made 30-foot-high hill adjoining the swimming lagoon, the structure sports two slides, offering a choice between an "S" turn or a spiral drop into a 3½-foot-deep splash-down pool.

More depth won't be needed because the slope of both slides is relatively gentle. "The water slide itself is not really that steep," said Hawthorne.

And it was built so that the handicapped can enjoy it too, added Kitasato. There are wheelchair ramps leading both to the top of the hill and out of the splash-down pool.

Slide attendants will be stationed at the top of the hill to regulate the flow of riders, and a lifeguard will be watching the splash-down pool, he said.

Riding the slide won't be cheap, though.

"What we're tentatively looking at is a combination swim and water slide pass for around $7" per person, an increase from the current swimming fee of $1, Hawthorne said.

The less adventurous who don't want an all-day pass will likely be able to opt for a less costly five-ride ticket.

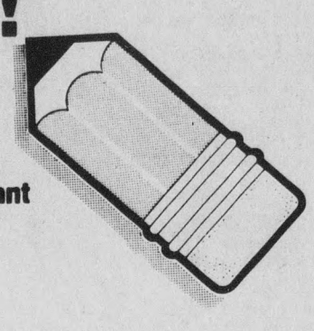
7AM TO 7PM! DAILY REPORT Classified 987-9200

HOW TO....

WRITE A CLASSIFIED AD THAT WORKS!!



Give readers the information they want and get the results... YOU want.

be complete.

Put yourself in the reader's place. If you were considering buying this item what would you want to know about it? Give the item's age, condition, size, brand name and any other information needed to describe it accurately and completely.

avoid abbreviations.

A few standard abbreviations can help you save space but don't overdo it. Too many abbreviations will make your ad look like a secret coded message. Rather than trying to figure out what you're trying to say, confused readers will go on to the next ad.

include price.

Price is one of the biggest concerns of classified readers. Ads that list prices will get their attention first. Including the price will also help you avoid inquiries from readers not in your price range.

List your telephone number or address so potential buyers will know HOW to contact you. State the best hours to call so they'll know WHEN to contact you. If you're not home when an interested prospect calls, chances are he won't call back.

feel free to ask for help.

Because help is free for the asking. The Daily Report maintains a staff of professional Advisors who write dozens of ads every day. They'll be happy to help you word your ad for the best results.

Place your classified ad TODAY!

CASH IN
Think of all those things lying around your home gathering dust and getting in the way. They could earn you some useful cash. That bicycle you never ride. Your old lawn mower. The guitar that never gets played. The old refrigerator and the spare TV no one ever watches. Somebody wants them - and is willing to pay you for them. So clear out those things you don't need around the house and turn them into useful cash - all it takes is a phone call!
